Market Review

Financial markets remained strong in June, ending one of the best quarters in past decades. Despite clear risks of a second wave of the Corona virus pandemic, the world economy has been progressively recovering from imposed lockdowns. Global economic surprise indices are all back into positive territory, meaning that economic data has been coming out stronger than previously anticipated. Furthermore, highly supportive monetary and fiscal policies have created a strong support for financial assets, keeping interest rates at bay and credit spreads relatively narrow. One of the additional measures was the ECB's increase in the Pandemic Emergency Purchase Programme as the Governing Council decided to increase the €750 billion envelope by €600 billion to a total of €1,350 billion.

In this context, the 10Y Bund yield ended the month broadly stable at -0.45%. Peripheral bonds posted strong positive returns as spreads tightened (Spain -9 bps, Italy -21 bps, Greece -31 bps). Corporate bonds performed similarly (IG +0.98%, HY +1.85%) as spreads traded lower (iTraxx Main -6 bps, iTraxx Crossover -47 bps).

Equity markets extended their gains, albeit at a slower pace. Lagging markets since the beginning of the year (Europe +2.85%, Emerging +6.96%) outperformed the US (+1.84%). The noticeable exception of Japan (-0.31%).

On the back of strong stimulus and better than expected economic data, the Euro appreciated during the month gaining 1.15% against the greenback and 1.26% against the Japanese Yen.

Portfolio Performance

During the month, the Fund has gained 0.65%. The strong Euro was a drag on our currency exposure, but both equities and bonds contributed positively to the overall performance. A large part of the rebound in equities was due to a "junk" rally where sectors that were the most hit gained strongly. As we continue to focus on high quality growth names, the stock selection has underperformed during the month. We have decided to slightly alter the overall exposure with Financials trackers (both in Europe and in the US) and some industrial names in the aerospace and defense sectors. The more aggressive trackers that we had included in the portfolio last month (automobile, oil & gas, and travel & leisure) were sold at a profit. Consequently, the overall equity exposure was brought down from 55% to 51%. We have also reduced the overall currency exposure from 34% to 29%.

Market Outlook

Immediately after the shutdown of much of the world's economy, the outlook seemed dire indeed. Today, despite the hardest economic contraction in almost a century and second wave fears, it looks like we are rapidly coming out of the woods. Leading economic data are already pointing to a second half rebound in activity and earnings, and the impact of fiscal and monetary stimulus is supplying significant support to financial assets and ultimately stoking demand.

We believe that the worst is indeed behind us, and that despite some permanent damage in certain sectors, we are now entering an early-cycle phase. We accept that the road will be bumpy as risks clearly persist, but on the back of strong stimulus and recovering economy, equity and credit markets should remain supported.
