Market Review

In contrast to last month, the market revised its rate expectations and abandoned the idea of an early pivot point expected for 2023. Central bankers' speeches and in particular that of J. Powell at the Jackson Hole symposium were particularly hawkish and reaffirmed that their priority remained the control of inflationary risk regardless of the consequences on growth. In this context, rising interest rates wreaked havoc in the financial markets. By segment, sovereign debt lost 5.1%, investment grade credit contracted by 5.0% and high yield credit fell by 0.8%.

Portfolio Performance

The fund lost 0.80% in August. It was the IG segment that was particularly negative. The HY was flat as it is less impacted thanks to spreads tightening and coupon clipping. Some HY bonds, driven by company specific news, had good returns (Sigma +15%, Fosun +9.6%, Almagora +5.7%).

Market Outlook

The ECB, lagging behind the Fed, is expected to take action. The market is now pricing in a 75bp hike for the September 8th meeting. They will also have to manage the fragmentation risk and the new tool (TPI) could be tested in this sensitive environment. Thus, we continue to favor lower duration bonds and have built up a cash pocket by reducing our HY exposure.
